Daniel Keyes

All journeys, even one through a maze, must begin somewhere. . .

Not all mazes are the same--the path that is right for us, may be a dead end for others.

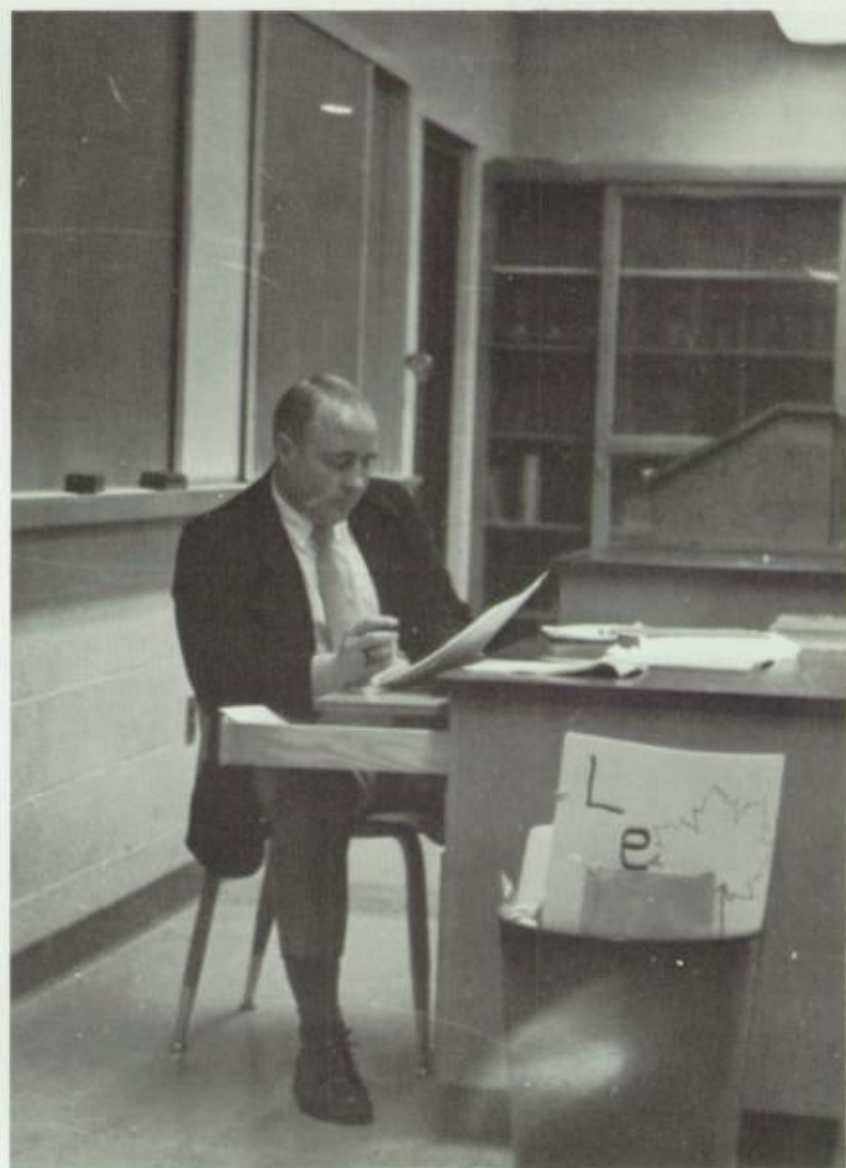

You find your way
in a maze by trial
and error--thus we learn by our mistakes. . .

We have an advantage over the mouse in the maze for he has no one to help and guide him.

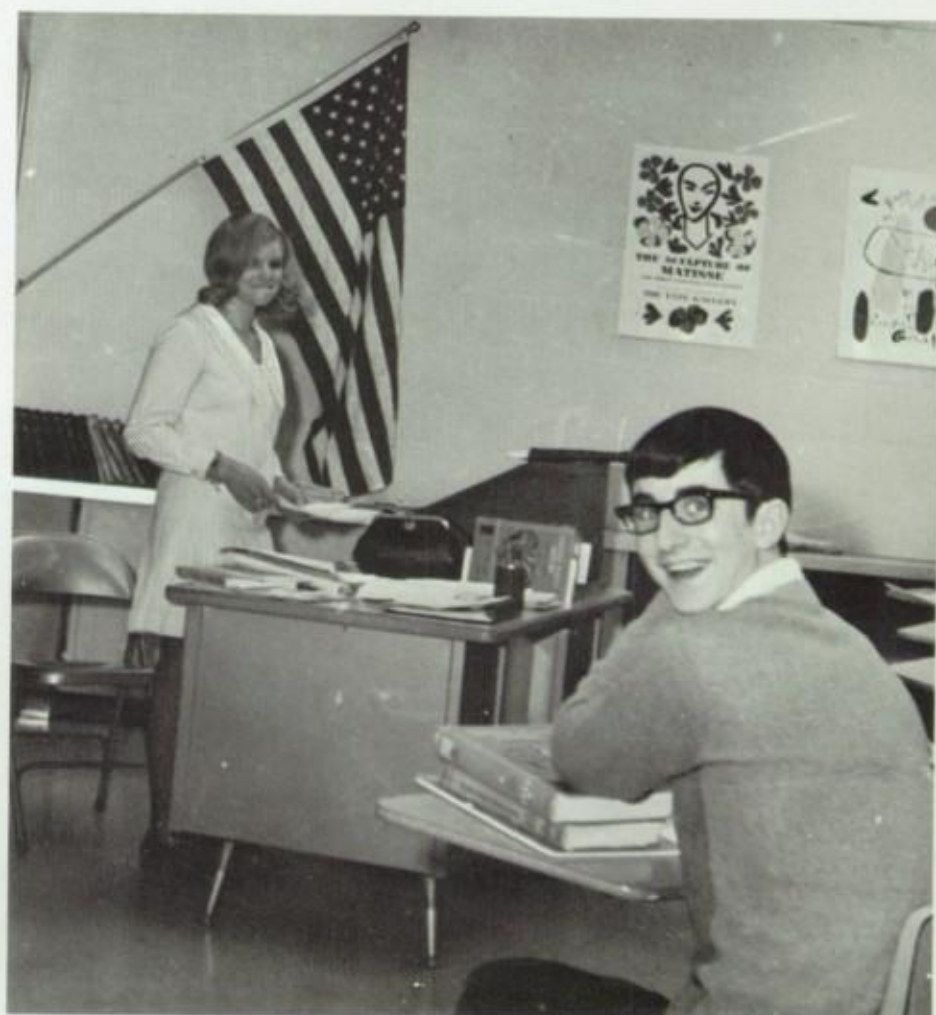

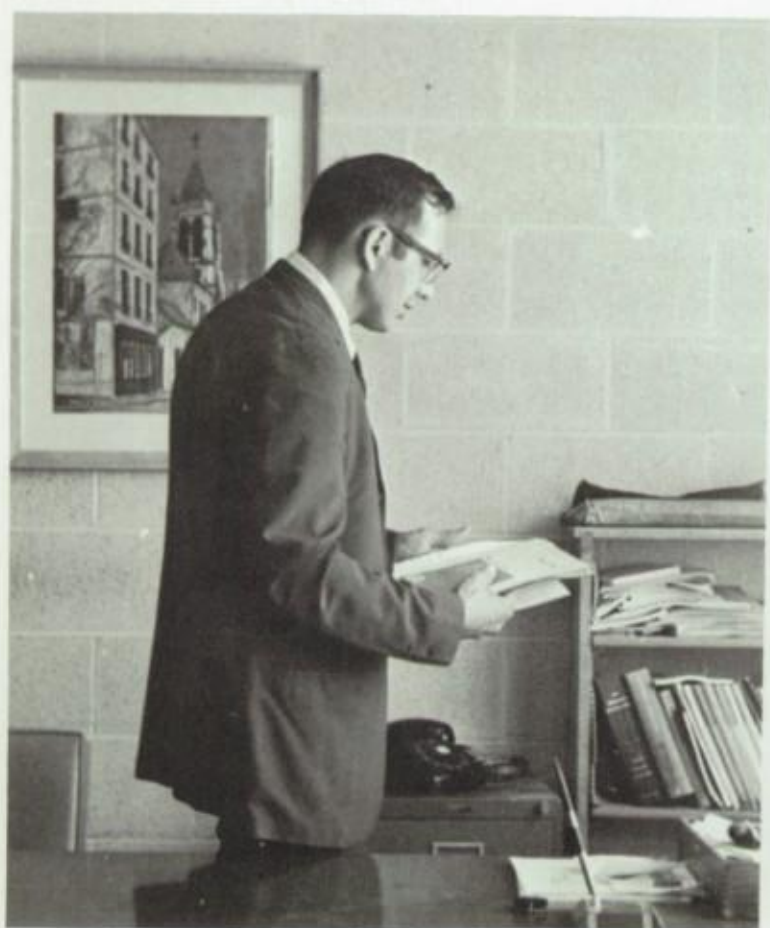

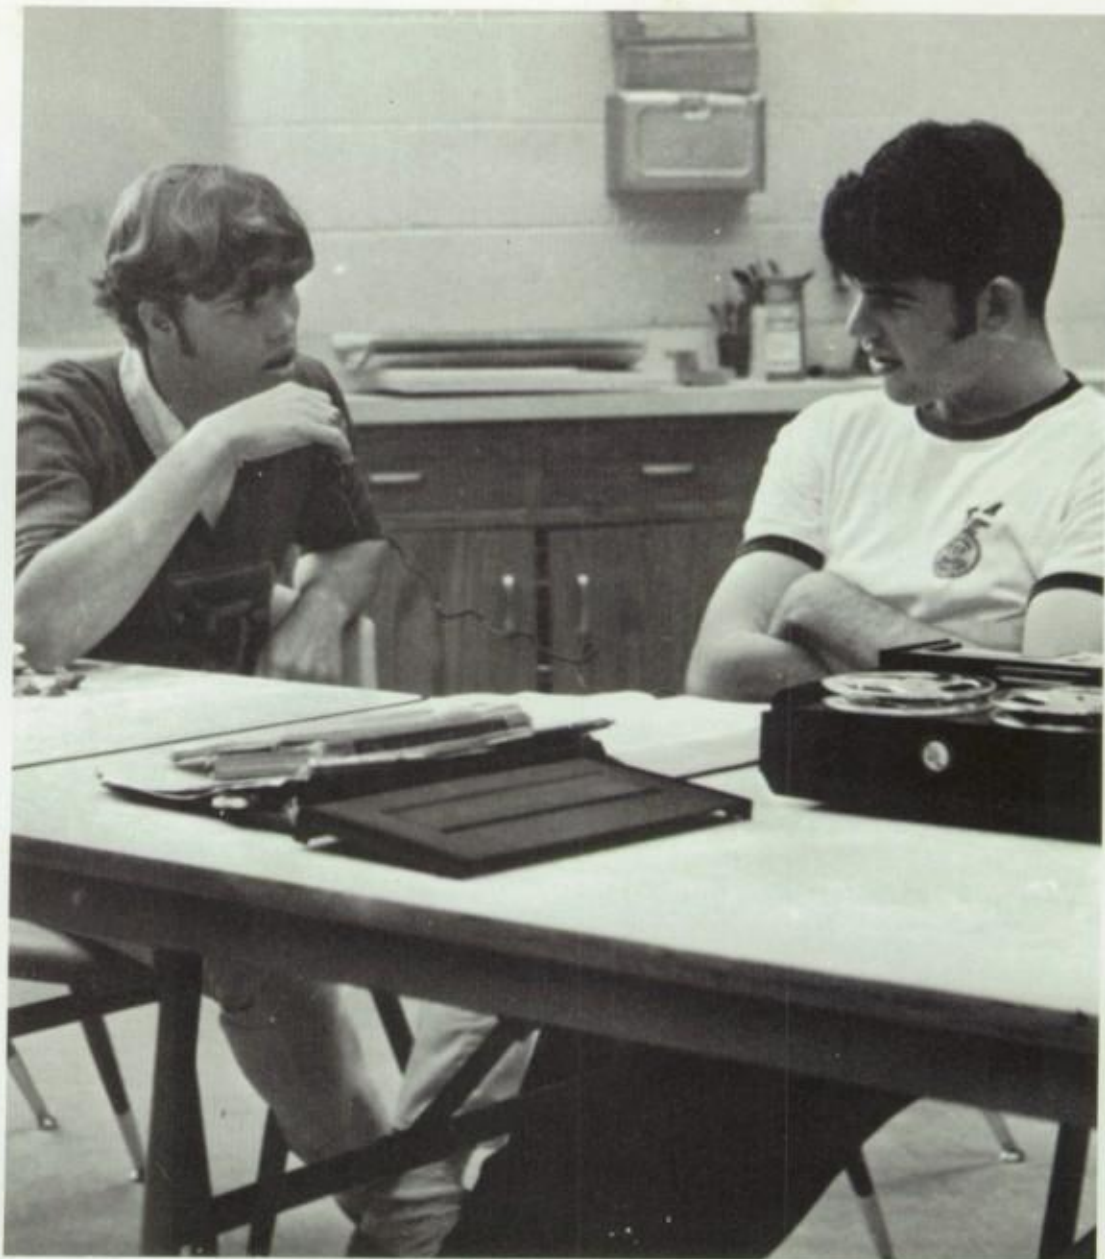

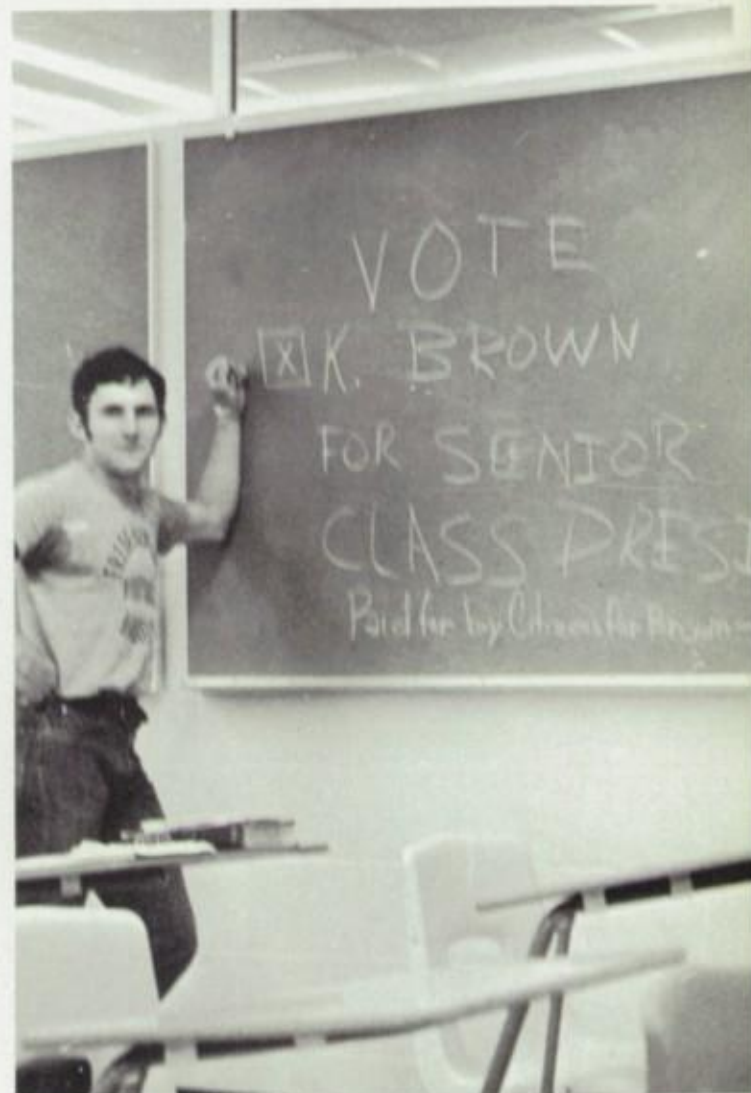

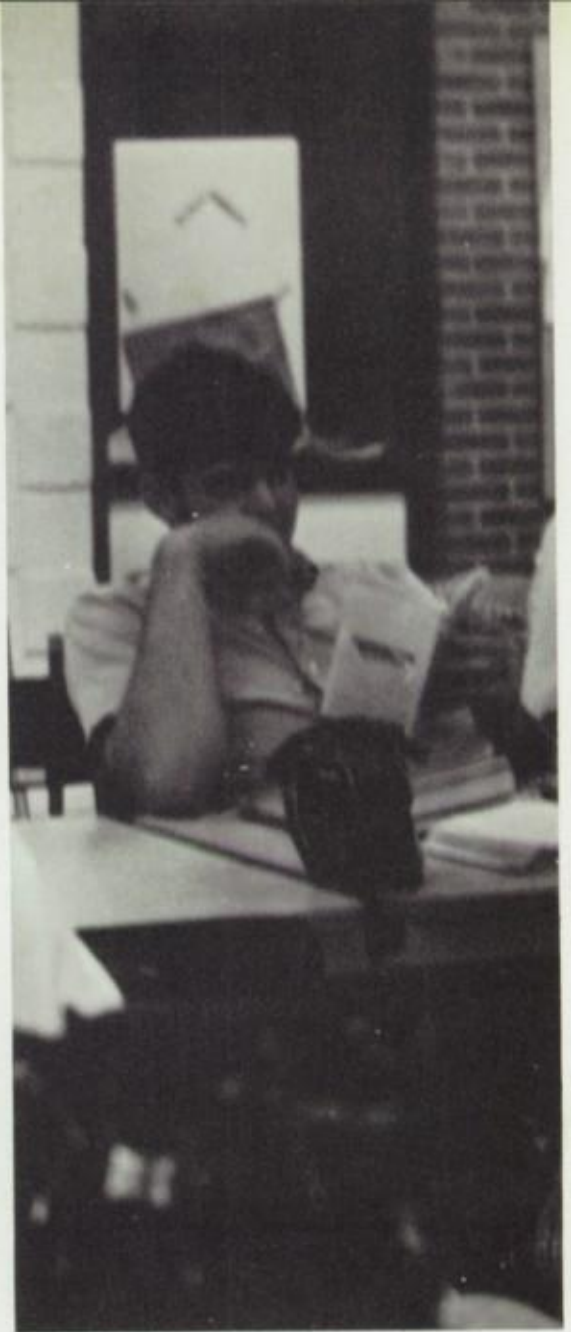

Language is sometimes a barrier instead of a pathway. . .

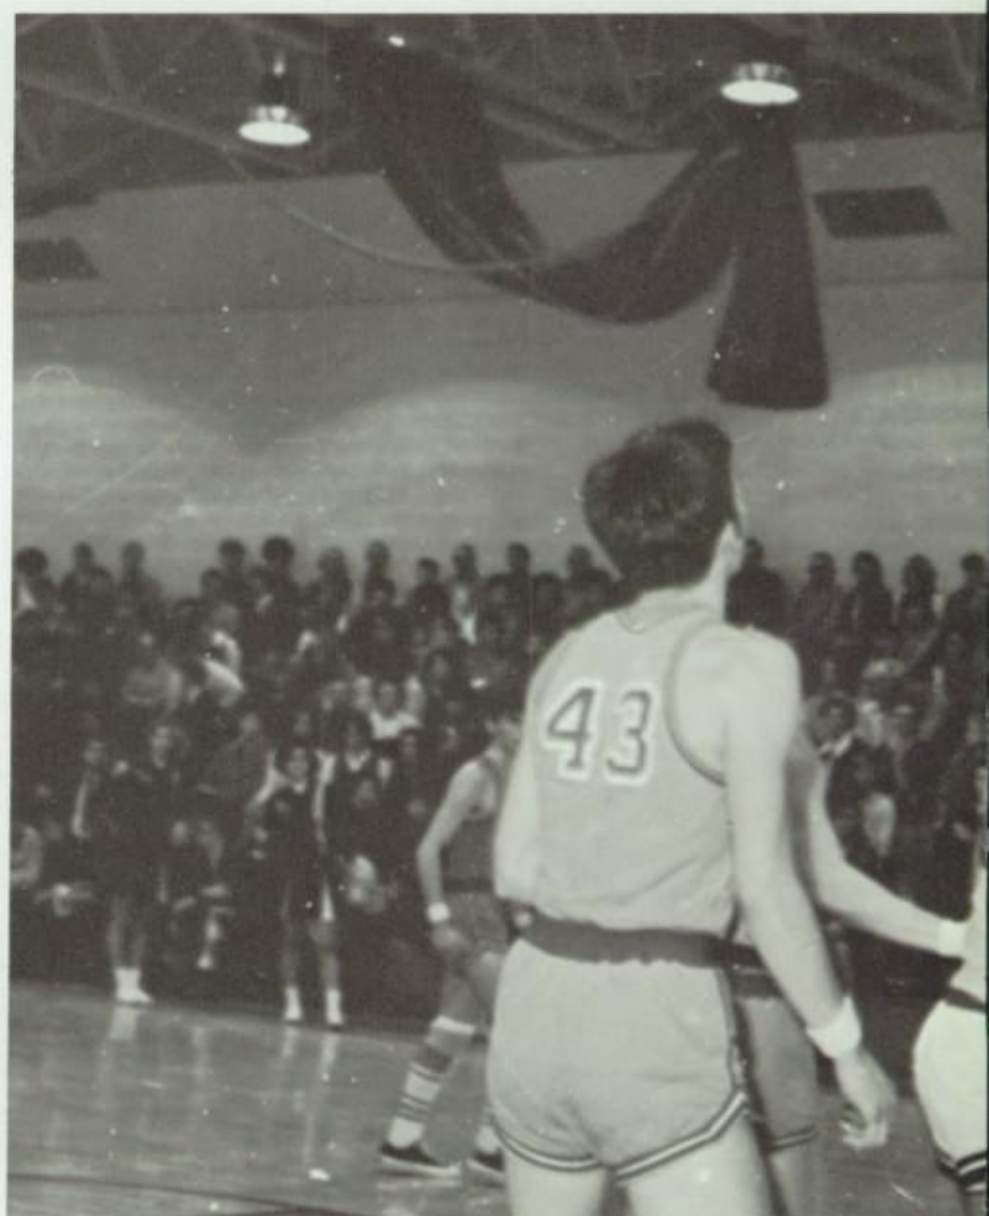

The farther along the maze you go, the more complex the choice--"The more intelligent you become the more problems you'll have

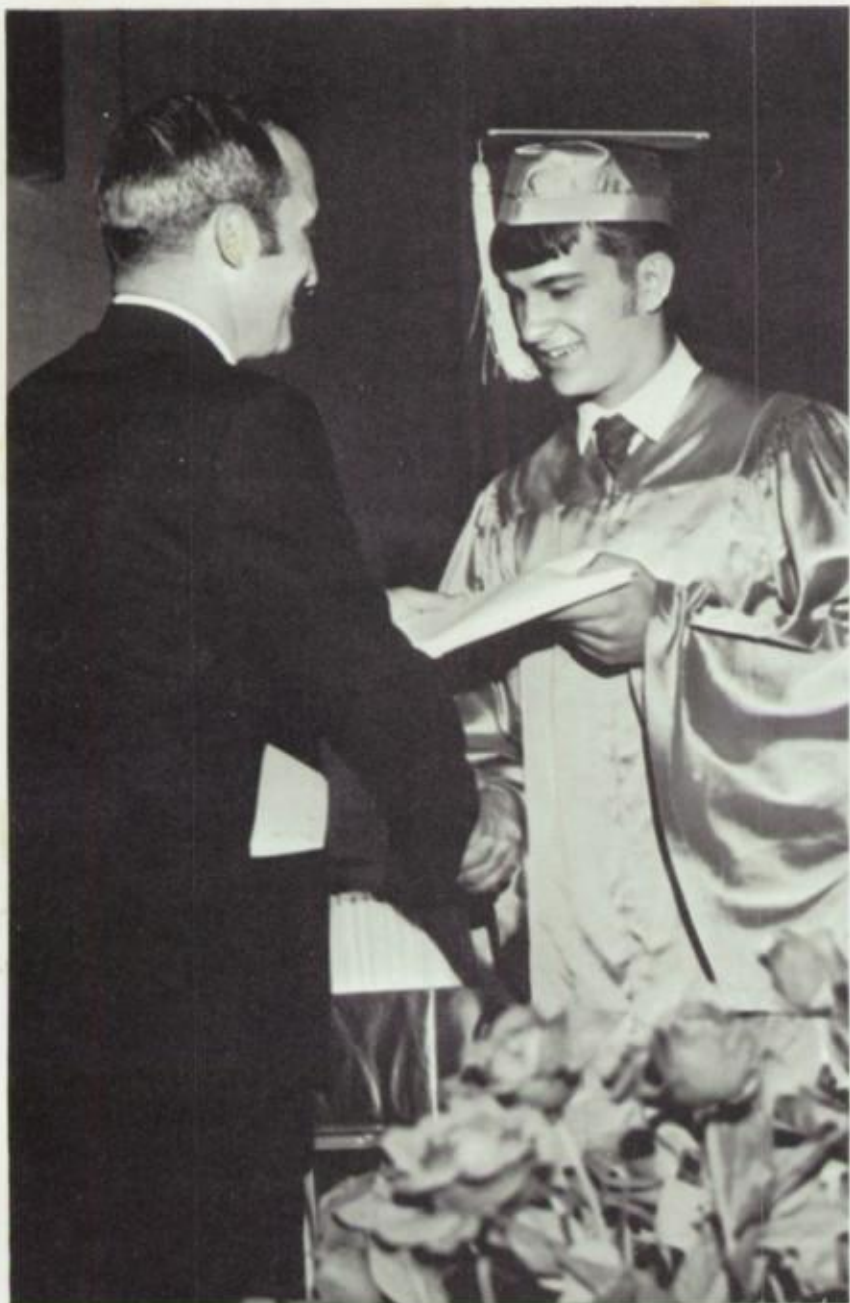

A maze must have its incentive--perhaps it is true that "success appears to be its own reward."

And knowing the paths I have followed, and the ones left to take, help me to understand what I am becoming. . .

"The mouse knows his maze has an end,
but if we are to keep achieving, the end of our maze must be ever distant.
